

Product Details

Title

The Sushi Prophecies

Author

August Hill

Genre

Fiction // Humour, Comic Fantasy

Tagline

With freedom, you either find yourself,
or you lose yourself

Page Count

275

Publisher

PLUMP PRESS

plumppress.com

Publication Date

Pre-Sale // May 19, 2020

On Sale // June 30, 2020

Price

$9.99 / $14.99 USD

ISBNs

9781777114312 (eBook)

9781777114305 (Paperback)

Formats

Available at

Sales Inquiries

sales@plumppress.com

Social Media

@augusthillbooks

augusthillbooks.com

Contact

august.hill@plumppress.com

Author Bio

2-Line Bio

August Hill's expertise in journalism and marketing brought him deeper into story-telling, where he now focusses his attention on humour fiction to make the world a funnier place to be.

Longer Bio

August Hill was born outside of Toronto, Canada, and now spends his time between Vancouver and the islands of the Salish Sea. As a child he ate up his father's extensive library in secret and by the age of eight had written an epic novel of such great heights it stirred one of the good teachers to send him off to various writing conferences. He chose larger books to sit upon so as to not seem conspicuous to the other attendees.

Hill excelled in journalism school writing solely about the things he most obsessed over in life, attaining an MBA to build businesses around those same things thereafter. Having crawled up into the mucky ranks of academia and business, he now returns full circle to the page, exposing the characters and themes of a fragile and silly world through his fiction. His comedic explorations soar in a fresh title The Sushi Prophecies, a raucous urban tale dedicated to the magic at play all around us and all the best weirdos we love to hate.

Having eaten and surfed all over the world, Hill finds himself most touched by strangers of all types, but not like that. He spends much of his time by the sea with his hilarious baby boy, wonderfully Polish wife, eleven errant chickens, and a convict dog called Quest fetched from the Australian outback.

Working at an infamous hotel in the nineties, he once delivered a toothbrush to Barry Manilow, who was ironing his underwear at midnight.

Access Full Bio,
Author Interview
and High-Res Images

augusthillbooks.com/media-kit

Events & Interviews

Seasoned speaker available for events, interviews and signings

media@plumppress.com

5 Fast Facts

-  Awarded Top 40 Under 40 from Google
-  MBA with successful business exits in Sports and Music Tech
-  Been naked at every provincial parliament building in Canada, allegedly
-  Skydived over the Vegas strip for a promotional stunt, losing a parachute
-  Beat Harvard and Yale in an Italian Sailing Regatta before getting kicked out of a prince's palace for stealing a bottle of whiskey, allegedly

Author's Blog

Police chases, weird animals, amazing wine and surfing.

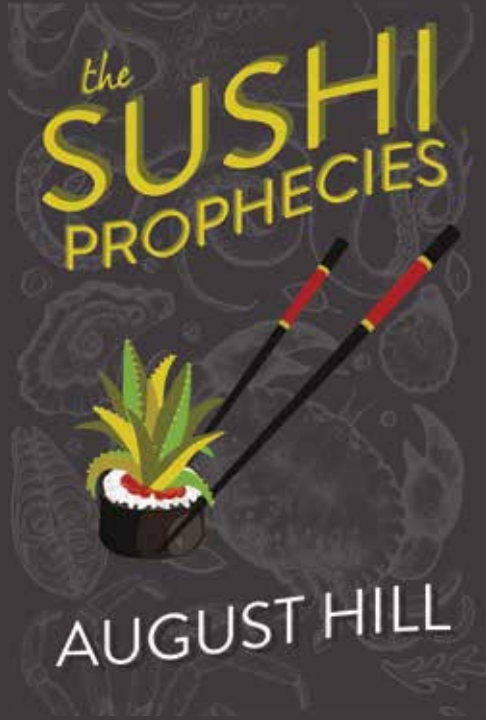

augusthillbooks.com/Blog

Contact

august.hill@plumppress.com

The Sushi Prophecies

Synopsis

Vancouver has become a disturbed, retched mess of murderous blue-bloods and lost hipster gardeners, sadistic baristas and immortal sushi masters. A drug-fed breeding ground of scoundrels set in an orgy of late-night tapa bars, yoga classes and sunset booze cruises.

Tribes have descended upon Lotusland, and at the center lies a hero and a hostage. Sebastian, an idle artist barely escapes crippling social anxieties by managing a posh urban gardening center and its group of varied misfits. He awakens one morning to a new world where all around him the preternatural and fantastic have crept through his city...and his mind.

Battle lines are drawn as mediocre villains and awkward heroes climb up into a dumpster fire of ancient morality and inventive revenge. At the center of it all lies The Plant, a mysterious tropical succulent that destroys minds, or fixes them, depending on where your morals lie. Thrust into leadership, Sebastian and his weirdos have six days to unwrap a messy family conspiracy before the city is lost and dread overtakes the entire west coast.

Coming at a time when societies and cultures are bonding together through forced distancing, The Sushi Prophecies offers hilarious relief and bizarre parallels all at once.

A truly unique voice and tale, for truly unique times.

Select Characters

-  Sebastian the nursery manager who hates his pot-head girlfriend and most of the hipsters, yuppies and dummies of Vancouver
-  Ms. Bowry a jewel-encrusted, tea-drinking ghoul with a chip on her shoulder and deep, deep pockets
-  Burton the record shop owner, full of stories from decades of rock and roll, and purveyor of fine hallucinogens
-  The Rastafarian Manatee an evil yoga instructor who feeds from sweaty energy, tattoos and piercings
-  Malcolm the oily but loyal bartender with a penchant for young ladies of the night
-  Aira the immortal sushi master whose kaiseki has all the answers but even more questions
-  Cam the young Star Wars disciple with a drooling problem and subtle murderous rage
-  The Plant a mysterious succulent from South America with mind-melding propositions

Access Press Release and Sample Chapters

augusthillbooks.com/media-kit

“

Her eyebrows were scarred deeply from old piercings, her skin perfectly smooth from thousands of hours of pacing in this wet place. Tattoos from foreign needles lay over her arms and chest like wicked lace.

